

Woodbridge Wines and Aruba Trading Company awards coolers to lucky winners

Three lucky winners received attractive wine coolers from Aruba Trading Company as the campaign to introduce the Woodbridge Wines from Robert Mondavi Vintners of California to Aruba ended. On Wednesday evening, two of the winners, Ruud Oaman and Genvieve Garcia received their new custom wine coolers that hold eighteen bottles, along with three complementary bottles of Woodbridge Wines from Aruba Trading Company Sales and Marketing Manager Jorge Curiel. Assisting him in this pleasant task was Sandrina Garrique, Regional Portfolio Manager to the Caribbean for Constellation Group, distributors of Woodbridge Wines. The first presentation was made at Ling & Son's Supermarket, where the wine connoisseurs had purchased their vino, and the third winner, Eveline Postema received her cooler the next evening at Super Foods, which sold her the bottle that earned her the winning raffle ticket.

Woodbridge Wines come from a small subsidiary of wine giant Robert Mondavi, located in the Lodi region of California, and considered by experts to be the finest wine-producing region of the state. Brad Alsderson, general manager of Woodbridge Winery, which was established twenty-five years ago, asserts that keeping to the traditional methods of producing wine and being a tiny winery has contributed to the success of their product. "When we started we set out to make great-tasting wines that are affordable for every day enjoyment, and that is just as true today," is their motto. Ruud, Genvieve and Eveline will certainly be inclined to agree as they enjoy their winnings; congratulations!
